Supporting the whole nursing workforce

The RCN is the world's largest nursing trade union and professional body with over half a million members, all of whom are hard-working nursing staff just like you. Together, we can ensure that your voice is heard, and that support is available to you, if and when you need it.

Representation if and when you need it

We have local representatives, RCN officers and the largest in-house legal team* of any UK union on hand to help you.

We can support on a wide range of matters, from your working hours and concerns about your responsibilities, to difficulties at work, such as:

- a disciplinary or dismissal
- workplace bullying
- injury compensation claims
- if you've been wrongly accused of something that will have detrimental consequences
- if you've been reported to the police for a workplace incident
- referral to a regulatory body
- attendance at an Inquest or Fatal Accident Inquiry.

You, your family, and friends can also get help and advice from RCN Law with will writing, probate matters, setting up a trust or a lasting power of attorney.

Trained RCN representatives (RCN reps) are fellow RCN members who support members and build power within their workplaces.

RCN reps can support with employment matters, learning and development opportunities and matters of health and safety.

Any member can become an RCN rep, and if you are interested have a look at: rcn.org.uk/Get-Involved/rcn-reps

* In Scotland, help is on hand through our contracted solicitors who have been carefully selected just for our members.

Getting your voice heard

You deserve fair pay, terms and conditions, opportunities to develop your career, and a safe working environment. With RCN membership, you're part of a powerful collective voice for the nursing workforce. We also work alongside other professional bodies, trade unions and employers to secure a better working life for you.

Campaigning

Together, we're working to protect and value the profession we love. For nursing staff and for patients. Take action today as a nursing support worker member. rcn.org.uk/campaigns

RCN Professional Lead and RCN UK Nursing Support Workers Committee

The RCN's Professional Lead for Nursing Support Workers and the Nursing Support Workers Committee work together to represent you. Comprised of members from across the UK, the committee raises issues on behalf of the RCN's nursing support worker members.

Nursing Support Workers' Day

23 November

Every year, our national campaign brings together the public, patients and colleagues from across the UK to acknowledge, value and celebrate the nursing support workforce.

SAVE THE DATE in your diary to celebrate with us.
