

Library Subject Guide: Nursing Family History

Welcome to the RCN Library and Heritage Services subject guide to nursing family history.

We have split the guide into three sections depending on when your ancestor qualified, with a fourth section for nursing in wartime. To find out which guide you need you can use the following sum for an estimated qualification date:

Year of birth + 18 years (earliest age to enter training) + 2 years (shortest training length)

We hope that you find this useful and wish you luck with your research.

After 1943

1943-1973 (Published volumes)

Nurse registration in the UK began on 30 September 1921. The General Nursing Council maintained the register which was divided into 5 parts:

- General (reserved for female nurses)
- Fever Nurses
- Male Nurses
- Mental Nurses
- Sick Children's Nurses

Qualified nurses paid to be on the register and existing nurses had until 1923 to join. It was voluntary to join the register until the Nurses Act 1943. In 1943, nurses who had qualified before July 1925 had one last opportunity to register. After 1943, it was compulsory to join the register. Nurses who maintained their membership were published year on year. It wasn't until the 1950's that only newly qualified nurses were published.

Registration records include the following information:

- Full name
- Registration date
- Address (at that time)
- Place and date of qualification

Step 1: General Nursing Council Registers (State Registered Nurses)

You can find the following GNC registers at the RCN via Ancestry:

1. GNC England & Wales Register of Nurses, 1922-68
2. GNC Scotland Register of Nurses, 1945-48, 1948 supplement, 1950, 1955 and 1957-67.
3. GNC Ireland Register of Nurses, 1939, 1943 and 1945-48.
4. JNMC Northern Ireland Register of Nurses, 1943, 1946, 1949, 1951, 1956 and 1959

You can also find registers at the following locations:

GNC England and Wales Register

1. The National Archives: Full run (1922-1973)
2. Cambridge University Library: Full run

3. Oxford Libraries Online: Full run
4. Manchester Central Library's Technical Library: Registers 1946-68
5. Wellcome Library: Registers 1930-44, 46-47 and supplementary registers 1948-50
6. Trinity College Dublin: Registers 1967-69
7. The British Library: Registers 1922-68
8. National Library of Ireland: Registers 1930-68

GNC Scotland Register

1. National Records Scotland: Full run (1921-1983) Note: Access restricted until 75 years after the date created
2. Trinity College Dublin: Register 1961-67
3. The British Library: Register 1957

GNC Ireland Register

1. University College Dublin: Full Run (1921-1985) UCD have produced the following guide to their records:

University College Dublin (2008) An Bord Altranais Archives, Dublin: University College Dublin

JNMC Northern Ireland

1. Public Records Office of Northern Ireland (PRONI): Full Run (1922-1983)

Step 2: General Nursing Council Roll of Nurses (State Enrolled Nurse)

The Nurses Act, 1943 established a new nursing role for the profession. The Assistant Nurse or State Enrolled Nurse (SEN) or State Enrolled Assistant Nurse (SEAN). You can find records for SEN's in the Roll of Assistant Nurses, also known as the Roll of Nurses. The General Nursing Council kept the roll and set the syllabus for the two year course.

You can find the following roll of nurses at the RCN via Ancestry:

- GNC England & Wales Roll of Nurses, 1947-1968 (parts of 1947-48 missing)
- GNC Scotland Roll of [Assistant] Nurses, 1946 and 1956-66.
- JNMC Northern Ireland Roll of Nurses, 1949 and 1951.

You can also find full runs of the registers at the following locations:

GNC England and Wales Roll of Assistant Nurses (also known as Roll of Nurses) for State Enrolled Nurses (SEN):

1. The National Archives: Full Run (1947-68)
2. Cambridge University Library: Full Run
3. The British Library: Roll of Assistant Nurses 1947-48

Step 4: Other sources of registration

Royal British Nurse's Association (RBNA) (1887-1966)

The RBNA kept the first 'list' of qualified nurses. There are 10,000 nurses on this list held at King's College London Archive. The reference you will need is: GB0100 GB 0099 KCLCA RBNA You can make an appointment by visiting the Archive's 'visiting us' webpage:

<http://www.kcl.ac.uk/library/collections/archivespec/visiting/index.aspx> You can also find the 1909 list at the RCN via Ancestry:

Queen's Nursing Institute (District Nursing) (1887 -)

We can trace District Nursing back to 1859 when William Rathbone employed Mary Robinson to nurse his wife at home.

- England and Wales (1887-1997)

You can find records at the Wellcome library. The reference you will need is: SA/QNI. To make an appointment please see: <http://wellcomelibrary.org/using-the-library/>

- Scotland (1889-)

You can find records at the RCN Archive, Edinburgh:

http://www.rcn.org.uk/development/library_and_heritage_services/contact_us

- Ireland (1890-1967)

You can find records at the Archives of University College Dublin (UCD) The reference you will need is: P220/28 and you can make an appointment by visiting:

<http://www.ucd.ie/archives/planningyourvisit/> UCD have produced the following guide to their records:

Step 5: Nurses Leagues (1899)

St. Bartholomew's formed the first nurses' league in 1899. The league would publish a regular magazine or have a website for alumni to keep in touch. When nurse training became a degree based course, some leagues became university alumni associations. To find out if a hospital had a nurses' league, see:

http://discovery.nationalarchives.gov.uk/results/r?_st=adv&_dss=range&_hb=oth&_q=nurses+league

You can find the Guy's Hospital Nurses' League: register of Guy's nurses (1950 and 1960) at the RCN via Ancestry

Step 6: Midwifery

- England and Wales

The Midwives Act, 1902 mandated the state enrolment of midwives. Midwives had to enrol with the new Central Midwives Board (CMB) by 1910. You can find the CMB England & Wales Roll of Midwives 1902-83 at the National Archives. The reference you will need is: DV 7 To visit the National Archives please see: <http://www.nationalarchives.gov.uk/visit/>

- Scotland

The Midwives Act, 1915 mandated the state enrolment of midwives with the Central Midwives Board, Scotland. You can access the CMB Scotland (1917-68) at the RCN via Ancestry:

- Ireland

The Midwives Act, 1918 mandated the state enrolment of midwives with the Central Midwives Board, Ireland. You can find the CMB Ireland Roll of Midwives 1919-85 at University College Dublin (UCD). UCD have produced the following guide to their records:

University College Dublin (2008) An Bord Altranais Archives, Dublin: University College Dublin

- Northern Ireland

With the Government of Ireland Act, 1920, the Northern Ireland National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting was established in 1921. You can find the Roll of Midwives 1922-88 at the Public Record Office of Northern Ireland and the reference you will need is NBN. To access the records please see: http://www.proni.gov.uk/index/visiting_proni.htm

Royal College of Midwives

The Midwives Institute (c.1880) now the Royal College of Midwives played a crucial role in the passing of the Act. You can find their membership and certification records at the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists (RCOG). You can access these by contacting the RCOG library: <http://www.rcog.org.uk/content/information-enquiries>

The Royal College of Midwives have produced a guide to searching for Midwifery ancestors that you can access here:

Step 7: Training or employment record

Florence Nightingale set up the first nurse training school at St. Thomas Hospital, London in 1860. Her passion for formal nurse training led to her establishing a three year training course. News of her success spread across London and the United Kingdom where many more hospitals began to offer training.

The hospital records database lists UK hospitals past and present. You can search for the hospital where your ancestor trained to find the archive that holds records for nursing or staffing: <http://www.nationalarchives.gov.uk/hospitalrecords/search.asp> For example, type 'St Thomas' in the 'hospital name' search box and chose 'St Thomas' Hospital, London'. Scroll to the bottom and you will see that records relating to Nursing 1844-1996 and staff 1871-1999 are found at London Metropolitan Archive.

Please note that due to changes in the NHS some records in the database may be out of date. If you are unable to locate records, check with your local record office. To find your local record office, you can search here: <http://discovery.nationalarchives.gov.uk/find-an-archive>

Step 8: National Archives: Discovery

You can search the National Archives Discovery for information on local archives and their recent accessions. To search, chose 'advanced search' and enter your key word. For example, your ancestors name, hospital name, or general search term such as 'nurse' and check the 'search other archives' box at the bottom: <http://discovery.nationalarchives.gov.uk/>

Step 9: Historical Nursing Journals

Once you have found a record of your nursing ancestor, you may wish to search historical nursing journals and local newspapers for. Journals include information on appointments, profiles on nurses and hospitals as well as news in nursing and opinion pieces.

Nursing Record/British Journal of Nursing (1888-1956)

1973-1983 (Computerised)

In 1973, the General Nursing Council kept its membership information electronically. You can find these records at the National Archives and the reference you will need is DT12.

1983-2002

Step 1: United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting (UKCC)

After the closure of the General Nursing Council, the UKCC was responsible for the registration of nurses, midwives and health visitors. The UKCC national boards set the syllabus for training and were responsible for investigation of misconduct. You can find records at the National Archives and the reference you will need is: KN 2

Please note that some aspects of the register are closed due to the data protection act 2003. For further information about the UKCC you can find records at the National Archives and the reference you will need is: KN

2002-present

Step 1: Nursing and Midwifery Council (NMC)

In 2002, the UKCC ceased to exist and the NMC came in to being as the regulatory body for nursing and midwifery. The NMC cannot give out any personal information about nurses on their register, under the Data Protection Act 2003. You can search the current register online here:

<https://www.nmc.org.uk/registration/search-the-register/>

If you are seeking a living person the National Archives has a useful guide detailing how to go about doing this: <http://www.nationalarchives.gov.uk/help-with-your-research/research-guides/living-people/>

Please note that the RCN is unable to disclose any information regarding our members due to the Data Protection Act, 2003.
